Postgraduate research degree in interpretation 2003-2004

Robin SETTON.
Published: February 26, 2003 Last updated: December 2, 2015

The School of Translation and Interpretation (ETI) offers a one-year postgraduate research degree programme (D.E.A., Diplôme d’études approfondies) in interpretation studies beginning in October of each academic year. Although the programme is primarily designed for students planning to go on to do a Ph.D. in interpretation studies, it will also be of interest to all those wishing to deepen their knowledge of interpretation theory and its various applications.

The programme includes an introduction to the source disciplines of the field, its methodology, models and theoretical frameworks, as well as courses on interpreter training and evaluation. Credits are earned in mandatory and optional courses, some of which can be taken in psychology or linguistics, and a mini-thesis (research project). Applicants must hold a recognised diploma in conference interpretation.

Additional details and course descriptions for 2003-4 can be found on the ETI website on the formations page as of March 8th, 2003.

The closing date for applications for 2003-4 is 31st March 2003. Students wishing to apply for a place should send (i) a Curriculum Vitae, (ii) a statement of purpose, (iii) photocopies of diplomas with official course and grade transcripts and (iv) an outline of their research project, t

Mme Doris SCHMIDT FOURMONT
Conseillère aux études
Ecole de traduction et d’interprétation
UNI MAIL
Boulevard du Pont-d’Arve 40
CH-1211 Genève 4, Switzerland

Recommended citation format: